Ethical Leadership In The Public Safety Learning Environment

This workshop explores the unique relationship that develops between instructor and student and the dilemmas that can result. From test security and processes, to activity selection, to after class activities, ethics in the classroom environment is everyone's business; student, instructor, and administrators alike. This presentation uses a facilitated learning process involving scenarios, video case studies, and student-based activities to examine the issues, possibilities, and individual actions needed to doing the right thing in the learning environment for the student, instructor, and the community.
